Statement of Compliance
California Proposition 65

The Safe Drinking Water and Toxic Enforcement Act, commonly known as Proposition 65 (Prop 65), requires businesses to provide a “clear and reasonable” warning before knowingly and intentionally exposing anyone in California to a listed chemical. The list which the California Office of Environmental Health Hazard Assessment (OEHHA) updated December 29, 2023 contains over 900 chemicals that are known to cause cancer, birth defects, or other reproductive harm.

Industrial Magnetics' products have been reviewed for listed content, and any products that contain listed chemicals are appropriately labeled with the required warning.

Inconsequential chemical content is also present in the composition of formed metal components, or in surface treatments such as plating. This content does not exist in a leachable form on the product surfaces—it is permanent in the absence of destructive methods or abuse. For these products the presence of the chemical alone does not present exposure under reasonably foreseeable use conditions, and warnings are not indicated.
